

It Might Get Messy!

Workshop for Child Care Providers,
Preschool Teachers & Parents

Thursday, May 19

Dinner will be served!

5:30 - 8:30 pm

975 Broadway, Jackson

Research supports that children learn best through self directed play.

In this workshop, participants will become reacquainted with the values of play, and play-based early childhood education.

Workshop participants will explore creative expression activities for young children as well as learning to adapt early childhood environments to support play-based emergent curriculum.

Participants will gain new ideas and make connections for supporting creativity in their practice while learning how open-ended and engaging activities will foster creativity and creative thinking.

And remember... it really might get messy, so dress accordingly and plan to engage in some hands-on messy fun!

Workshop presented by Kim Adams of Barron Park Preschool, in Palo Alto -
